II. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This is the seventh report in a series of AD&C surveys to evaluate new and existing loans which builders and developers have drawn for land acquisition, land development and for single-family and multifamily condo and rental construction. The following areas are covered by this survey.

1. Primary source of Credit
2. Availability of new loans
3. Changes which lenders are making in new loans
4. Putting projects on hold until financing climate gets better
5. Construction-to-permanent financing (new)
6. Any problems repaying outstanding loans
7. Steps taken to resolve the situation
8. Lenders tightening the terms or conditions of outstanding loans
9. How they are tightening
10. Reasons given by lenders for restricting the availability of new loans and for tightening the terms and conditions on outstanding loans.

This analysis – 2nd quarter of 2009 - is based on 362 responses received from a panel of 4,000 builders and developers. The responses across the four Census regions are as follows:

	No.	Percent
Northeast	35	10%
Midwest	75	21%
South	171	47%
West	81	22%
TOTAL	362	100%

RESPONDENTS' PROFILE

Two-thirds of the respondents to the survey are single-family builders, 11 percent are multifamily builders and 16 percent are land developers. The share of single-family builders across regions varies from 62 percent in the South, to 63 percent both in the Northeast, 69 percent in the Midwest and 73 percent in the West. About 60 percent of respondents reported at least one other operation (Exhibits 1, 2 & 3).

In the previous AD&C survey (1st quarter 2009), about 71 percent of respondents were single-family builders, 9 percent were multifamily builders and 14 percent land developers (Exhibit 4).

Survey respondents were also asked about their firm's dollar volume of revenue for 2008 and expected in 2009. About 45 percent of the respondents expect 2009 revenue at less than $1 million, 33 percent expect it between $1 million and $5 million, while the remaining 24 percent anticipate revenue of $5 million or more in 2009. The median amount of revenue for the respondents during 2008 was $2.64 million and the median expected for 2009 is $1.61 million (Exhibit 5). The median dollar volume of revenue expected for 2009 varies across region from $1.12 million in the Midwest to $1.23 million in the West, $1.77 million in the South and $2.56 million in the Northeast (Exhibit 6).

Respondents have consistently estimated their median 2008 revenue to be around $2.6 million in every AD&C survey since November 2008. Expected median revenue for 2009 has been estimated at about $1.6 million in surveys from both the first and second quarters of 2009 (Exhibit 7).

NEW LOANS

The share of respondents who sought new loans during the second quarter of 2009 was essentially unchanged from the previous quarter: 18 percent for land acquisition (17 percent in Q109), 20 percent for land development (19 percent), 42 percent for single-family construction (41 percent), 13 percent for multifamily condo construction (12 percent), and 10 percent for multifamily rental construction (also 10 percent in Q109) (Exhibit 8). There are some differences across regions in the share of respondents seeking specific type of loans (Exhibit 9). For example, only 8 percent of respondents in the Midwest sought new loans for land development during the second quarter of 2009, compared to 25 percent of those in the South. Also, while only 29 percent of respondents in the Northeast sought loans for single-family construction, about 46 percent did so in the West.

The share of builders seeking loans for any activity has declined significantly since May 2008 – when this series of AD&C surveys was begun. In the May 2008 survey, over 70 percent of respondents reported seeking loans (at some point during 2008) for land acquisition, land development, and single-family construction. Responses to NAHB's Quarterly Finance Survey (QFS) in the first quarter of 2008 – for which we have several years of history – also show over 60 percent of builders seeking new loans for those activities during that quarter (Exhibit 10).

The latest survey also asked about builders' primary source of credit during the second quarter of 2009 for land acquisition, land development, single-family construction and multifamily condo and rental construction. Commercial banks were the primary source for over 80 percent of the respondents for land development and single-family construction (Exhibit 11). For multifamily condo construction, land acquisition, and multifamily rental construction commercial banks were the primary source of credit for 76 percent, 69 percent, and 64 percent of the respondents, respectively. About one-fifth of respondents reported some "other" source of credit for land acquisition and multifamily condo construction, respectively. This "other" source was mainly private investors.

There were some differences across regions for primary source of credit. For Land Acquisition, commercial banks were the main source for over 80 percent of builders in the Northeast and South, but to only 42 percent of those in the West and 50 percent in the Midwest. For single-family construction, commercial banks were the main source across regions, but thrift institutions played a much more significant role in the Northeast – where 20 percent of builders reported this to be their primary source of credit compared to about 10 percent in all other regions (Exhibit 12).

For land acquisition, land development, and single-family construction, QFS historical data show that commercial banks were the primary source of credit to more than 80 percent of respondents for most of 2005-2006-2007 (Exhibits 13). Although commercial banks were also the main source of credit for multifamily construction, thrift institutions, mortgage and finance companies tend to provide a slightly bigger share of funding for it than for the other three activities i.e. 30 percent of credit for multifamily construction in the second quarter of 2005 came from thrifts, mortgage, and finance companies; 35 percent in the third quarter of 2006, 28 percent in the fourth quarter of 2007, and 25 percent in the first quarter of 2008.

Respondents also had to rate the availability of new loans as better, about the same, or worse for each type of activity compared to the preceding quarter (Exhibit 14). In the second quarter of 2009, the share reporting conditions were "worse" declined considerably for land acquisition, going down to 64 percent from 82 percent in the first quarter of the year.

Meanwhile, the share reporting conditions were “about the same” jumped from 15 percent to 35 percent during the same time period.

The availability of new loans for multifamily condo construction and single-family construction saw a similar pattern: a higher share of respondents indicating conditions were “about the same” instead of “worse”. Thus, new loan availability for multifamily condo construction was rated as better by none, about the same by 28 percent (13 percent in Q109) and worse by 72 percent (82 percent in Q109). For single-family construction, new loan availability was rated as better by four percent, about the same by 34 percent (29 percent in Q109), and worse by 63 percent (71 percent).

Availability of new loans for Land Development was rated as better by two percent, about the same by 23 percent and worse by 75 percent – unchanged from the ratings in the first quarter of 2009. Availability of new loans for Multifamily Rental Construction was rated as better by four percent of the respondents, about the same by 33 percent and worse by 63 percent of the respondents – also unchanged from the previous quarter. Ratings for loan availability were very similar across regions of the country – with one exception: zero percent of those in the Northeast rated loan availability for multifamily rental construction as “worse”, compared to 58 percent in the South, 60 percent in the West, and 78 percent in the Midwest (Exhibit 15).

Historically, none of the QFS respondents in the first quarter of 2008 rated availability as better for any of the activities (compared to the prior quarter), with 73 percent, 64, percent, 63, percent, and 54 percent of respondents reporting worse availability for multifamily construction, land acquisition, land development, and single-family construction, respectively (Exhibit 16). In contrast, in the first quarter of 2007, availability of new loans for single-family construction was rated worse by only 15 percent, for multifamily construction by 17 percent, for land development by 21 percent, and for land acquisition by 33 percent. In the first quarter of 2005, less than five percent of QFS respondents rated the availability of new loans for any activity as worse.

Among respondents who said that availability of new loans for land acquisition, land development, single-family construction, multifamily condo construction, or multifamily rental construction was “worse” during the second quarter of 2009 compared to the first quarter of 2009, the nature of the change was reported as follows (Exhibit 17):

- 80 percent reported that “lenders are lowering the allowable LTV (or loan to cost) ratio”,
- 76 percent reported that “lenders are not making new loans”,
- 75 percent reported that “lenders are reducing amount willing to lend”,
- 62 percent reported that “lenders are requiring personal guarantees or collateral not related to the project”,
- 56 percent reported that “lenders are increasing the interest rates”,

- 48 percent reported that “lenders are increasing documentation requirements”,
- 45 percent reported that “lenders are increasing the spread of interest rate over index”,
- 43 percent reported that “lenders are requiring out-of-pocket payment of interest or borrower funding of interest reserve”,
- 43 percent reported that “lenders are refusing to make ‘relationship’ loans”,
- 40 percent reported that “lenders are increasing pre-sale/pre-lease requirements”,
- 29 percent reported that “lenders are increasing points on loan”,
- 27 percent reported that “lenders are increasing other fees”,
- Similar changes are reported across the four Census regions, with one exception: while only 47 percent of Northeast respondent report the lenders are not making new loans, much higher shares are reporting this problem in the Midwest (71 percent), the South (81 percent) and the West (82 percent) (Exhibit 18).

The top two reasons given by respondents for why they reported availability for new loans as worse had not changed since the inception of the AD&C survey series – until the second quarter of 2009 when “lenders are not making new loans” replaced “lenders are reducing amount willing to lend” as the second most important reason given (Exhibits 19).

In response to the question “Are you putting projects on hold, until the financing climate gets better?” the following responses were received (Exhibits 20-21):

- 69 percent of the respondents reported putting “land acquisition” projects on hold,
- 71 percent of the respondents reported putting “land development” projects on hold,
- 66 percent of the respondents reported putting “single-family construction” projects on hold,
- 57 percent of the respondents reported putting “multifamily condo construction” projects on hold,
- 49 percent of the respondents reported putting “multifamily rental construction” projects on hold,
- There was no significant difference across the four census regions in the share of respondents putting projects on hold for any of the activities

The share of respondents putting land acquisition and land development projects on hold until the financing climate gets better saw a significant decline during the second quarter of 2009. More specifically, 69 percent of respondents reported putting land acquisition projects on hold until the financing climate gets better in the second quarter of 2009, compared to 78 percent in the first quarter of 2009. For land development, 71 percent put projects on hold versus 79 percent in the first quarter of 2009. The share of respondents putting single-family construction and multifamily condo and rental construction projects on hold did not change significantly (Exhibit 22).

CONSTRUCTION-TO-PERMANENT FINANCING

Three new questions about construction-to-permanent financing were introduced in the second quarter of 2009. First, respondents were asked if any of the homes built during the quarter by their firms were financed by a construction-to-permanent loan made to the buyer of the home: about 21 percent responded affirmatively (Exhibit 23). Among those that reported building any home with this kind of financing arrangement, the average percent of homes their firm built that were financed in this manner was 67 percent. For 43 percent of the respondents building homes with this type of financing, all 100 percent of their homes were financed with construction-to-permanent loans (Exhibit 24). Moreover, respondents had on average six customers apply for this type of financing, with an average of two not getting the necessary approval (Exhibit 25).

REPAYMENT/PROBLEMS/ADJUSTMENTS TO OUTSTANDING LOANS

In response to the question, “Are you having problems repaying any of your outstanding loans on schedule”, 33 percent of the respondents said “yes” on land acquisition loans, 36 percent on land development loans, 30 percent on single-family construction loans, 21 percent on multifamily condo construction loans, and 9 percent on multifamily rental construction loans (Exhibit 26). There are significant differences in responses across regions. In the West, 34 percent of builders responding are having problems repaying single-family construction loans, compared to 4 percent in the Northeast. While 43 percent of respondents in the West have problems repaying land development loans, only 15 percent of those in the Northeast do. As far as land acquisition loans, 19 percent of Northeast respondents are having problem repaying them, compared to 31 percent of those in the South, 36 percent in the Midwest, and 39 percent in the West (Exhibit 27). Overall, the share of respondents having problems with repaying outstanding loans did not change much between the first and second quarters of 2009 (Exhibit 28).

Builders who are having problems repaying any of the outstanding loans have reported the following steps to resolve the situation (Exhibit 29):

- 79 percent reported “use company/personal resources to repay”,
- 64 percent reported “seek a workout with current lender”,
- 32 percent reported “seek another lender to take over the loan”,
- 17 percent reported “allow current lender to foreclose”

The large majority of respondents in all regions are using company/personal resources to repay: 73 percent in the Midwest, 77 percent in the West, 81 percent in the South, and 100 percent in the Northeast. When it comes to seeking a workout with their current lender, a larger share of builders in the West are taking this step – 77 percent – than are in the Northeast – 43 percent. Also, while none of the respondents from the Northeast reported allowing their current lender to foreclose, 23 percent of those in the West took this step, as well as 13 percent of those in the Midwest, and 16 percent in the South (Exhibits 30). Compared to data from the first quarter of 2009, a larger share of builders is now using company/personal resources and seeking another lender to try to resolve repayment problems (Exhibit 31).

Among respondents who reported either seeking a workout with their current lender or seeking a new lender to take over the loan, 61 percent reported a successful resolution in the second quarter of 2009 (Exhibit 32). This success ratio varies across regions: from 50 percent in the Northeast to 57 percent in the South, 64 percent in the Midwest, and 68 percent in the West (Exhibit 33). The share of respondents reporting a successful resolution has seen an upward trend: 42 percent in November 2008, 45 percent in January 2009, 55 percent in January 2009, up to the current 61 percent in the second quarter of 2009 (Exhibit 34).

In response to the question, “Is your lender tightening the terms or conditions on outstanding loans prior to maturity”, 37 percent of the respondents said “yes” on outstanding land acquisition loans, 40 percent on land development loans, 37 percent on single-family construction loans, 27 percent on multifamily condo construction loans, and 19 percent on multifamily rental construction loans (Exhibit 36). Regions show a similar pattern in the share of respondents reporting lenders tightening terms or conditions (Exhibit 37).

The share of builders reporting tightening for multifamily rental and condo construction as well as single-family construction declined just slightly in the second quarter of 2009 compared to the first quarter of 2009, going from 25 percent to 19 percent for multifamily rental construction, from 31 percent to 27 percent for multifamily condo construction, and from 40 percent to 37 percent for single-family construction (Exhibit 38). For land acquisition and land development, the share of respondents reporting tightening remained flat in the second quarter of 2009.

Among respondents who indicated that lenders are tightening the terms or conditions on outstanding loans prior to maturity, the ways in which they are tightening was reported as follows (Exhibit 39):

- 62 percent reported the lenders are “requiring partial pay down based on reappraisal”, compared to 58 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 62 percent reported that lenders are “demanding additional assets as collateral”, compared to 57 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 44 percent reported that lenders are “refusing to allow additional draws”, compared to 43 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 40 percent reported that lenders are “terminating lender-funded interest reserve and requiring out-of-pocket interest payment”, compared to 35 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 22 percent reported that lenders are “calling the loans”, compared to 29 percent in the first quarter of 2009

How lenders are tightening depends on the region of the country: while 45 percent of builders in the South report they are “terminating lender-funded interest reserve and requiring out pocket interest payments,” only 8 percent of those in the Northeast report this method (37 percent of those in the West and 42 percent in the Midwest indicate lenders are doing this as well). Also, in the Northeast 92 percent report lenders are “demanding additional assets as collateral,” whereas that share is only 55 percent in the West, 58 percent in the Midwest, and 63 percent in the South (Exhibits 40).

Between the first and second quarters of 2009, the share of builders reporting that lenders were “calling the loans” declined from 29 percent to 22 percent, while the share reporting they were “terminating lender-funded interest reserve and requiring out pocket interest payments” rose from 35 percent to 40 percent (Exhibit 41).

REASONS LENDERS HAVE GIVEN FOR RESTRICTING THE AVAILABILITY OF NEW LOANS OR FOR TIGHTENING THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS ON OUTSTANDING LOANS PRIOR TO MATURITY

Builders responding to the survey reported that their lenders have given them the following reasons for restricting new loans or for tightening the terms of outstanding loans (Exhibit 42):

For Restricting Availability of New Loans

- 65 percent reported because “Regulators are forcing lenders to do it”, compared to 57 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 45 percent reported because of “Regulatory or accounting rules”, equal to the 45 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 43 percent reported because “Lender’s Board of Directors is demanding it”, compared to 48 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 35 percent reported because of an “Internal Decision”, compared to 36 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 34 percent reported because “Lender is concerned about loan performance”, compared to 37 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 26 percent reported because “Property is located in declining market”, compared to 28 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 11 percent reported because “Institution has been placed under FDIC control”, compared to six percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 12 percent reported “No reason given”, compared to 10 percent in the first quarter of 2009

There are some regional differences in responses regarding reasons lenders are giving for restricting the availability of new loans. For example, while 48 percent of respondents in the Northeast said that “regulators are forcing lenders to do it,” 67 percent of those in the South and West regions as well as 68 percent in the Midwest were given the same reason. Also, while “regulatory or accounting rules” was cited by 35 percent of respondents in the South, larger shares did so in the Northeast (52 percent), Midwest (53 percent), and West (54 percent) (Exhibits 43).

Overall, the share of respondents citing “regulators are forcing lenders to do it” as the reason for their restricting availability of new loans has been rising: it was 53 percent in January 2009, 57 percent in the first quarter of 2009, and now 65 percent in the second quarter of 2009 (Exhibit 44).

For Tightening the Terms and Conditions on Outstanding New Loans

- 46 percent reported because “Regulators are forcing lenders to do it”, compared to 44 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 34 percent reported because of “Regulatory or accounting rules”, compared to 33 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 33 percent reported because “Lender’s Board of Directors is demanding it”, compared to 36 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 25 percent reported because “Lender is concerned about loan performance”, compared to 30 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 25 percent reported because of an “Internal Decision”, compared to 23 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 17 percent reported because “Property is located in declining market”, compared to 20 percent in the first quarter of 2009
- Seven percent reported because “Institution has been placed under FDIC control”, compared to four percent in the first quarter of 2009
- 35 percent reported “No reason given”, compared to 31 percent in the first quarter of 2009

The reasons respondents were given for tightening terms and conditions on outstanding loans show some variation from region to region. For example, “regulators are forcing lenders to do it” was cited as the reason by only 22 percent of the respondents in the Northeast, but by about 50 percent in the South (as well as by 43 percent in the Midwest and 47 percent in the West). Also, because “property is located in a declining market” varies from 13 percent of the respondents in each the Midwest and South and 15 percent in the Northeast to 31 percent in the West (Exhibits 43-44).

Exhibit 35

Q10c. Please explain whether or not you were successful in seeking a workout with current lender or in seeking a new lender

- Additional money added to operating loan extension
- Bank is not interested in loaning money, only in deposits and fees
- bank unable to accept workout
- Banks are not willing to take another bank out no matter the LYV
- Banks restructured or extended terms.
- Banks so far have worked with us as we have been able to show sales and further reduce debt load.
- borrowed against existing collateral to pay interest.
- can't find another bank or thrift willing to loan
- cashed in 401k
- Current lender won't keep within long time term norms. In some instances requests for moderated terms are met with demands for even stiffer terms.
- Current Lenders, both private funds, are participating in a workout plan which involves both sides sitting tight for two years.
- Deed in Lieu
- Depends on the strength or condition of the bank. The healthy ones are more willing to work out the loan than the struggling ones.
- existing lender renewed loan for a short time but only after a significant paydown of principal, raising our interest rate & requiring a real estate tax escrow.
- Extended terms with substantial reduction of principal.
- Extensions, with interest due monthly or prepaid
- forbearance agreement
- Increased equity portion, negotiated longer term with lender, rented our existing inventory.
- initiated a forbearance agreement with one lender and a Deed in Lieu with another.
- Lender deferred payment for six months added interest to end of payments.
- Lender has extended loans.
- Lender would not decrease the acceleration of payoff on individual units, which I had requested. They said FDIC rules dictated no reduction.
- Lenders are killing us. We have buyers, but can't get them financed and therefore can't take down lots fast enough to make the bank happy. The banks haven't foreclosed, but will be soon if they don't start lending.
- lenders are not willing to talk unless you are into default
- Lenders seem more willing to restructure
- LOAN MARKET HAS DRIED UP
- loan was extended
- local small bank more receptive to local market but charge higher fees and rate.
- My small regional banks have been able and willing to lower payments or temporarily suspend payments.
- Negotiated a loan modification agreement that obligates some set paydowns of LD loan, independent of sales.
- Negotiations still in process. Successful resolution appears doubtful.
- New lender indicated already too many real estate loans.
- New loan attempt unsuccessful
- no loans available from the banks, period, they say FBIC will rate the loan as a bad loan the day it is made.
- No one willing to invest in development
- No other bank wants to take over any loans. First Bank from Missouri refuses to work with us on our current A&D loan.
- No other banks will take on the loan. Still trying to do a work out with current lender and seeking private funds
- not yet, but still working on it
- Obtained extensions

- One year extension
- Partial paydown on existing with decrease in value of assets
- Short Sales and deferred interest with collateral.
- So far have been able to work out a forbearance agreement with bank - but only good to 12/31/09.
- So far, lenders working with us
- So far, my loan officer has been able to keep the bank from foreclosing. The market value of the land has dropped well below the loan amount and the bank really doesn't want it either.
- sold out before trustee sale
- some banks will accept workouts other banks won't consider them and are trying to foreclose. Ultimately, they will force the other bank to foreclose as well
- Some Lenders are willing to extend Loans with IR.
- Some what...if you consider giving up everything you have ever worked for in your life for collateral on a paying viable loan.
- Still in process
- Still negotiating
- Still negotiating but bank is being pressured by Bank Examiners to take an unreasonable position. Bank is willing to work with us but their hands are tied!
- still trying
- Still working on it, but time is running out.
- Still working on it, for many months
- Success can be defined in limited terms. After taking over a loan from a previous partnership two years ago and representing the weakness and strengths of the financials, we completed the improvements, the market collapses, interest reserve runs out. Other straight forward discussions with the bank with an agreement to keep an open mind, foreclosure via advertisement, which limits liability, bank intentionally bids less at sheriff sale and now looks for deficiency judgements. The attorneys have found their revenue streams and the banks are not interested in hearing the truth, just crush their past loyal customers.
- The banks don't really seem to care. Basically it's pay the interest or they want to foreclose.
- The lender realized that we are the best source to get rid of the lots and land.
- The only work out is to pay off or move loan. There is now where to move a loan
- They were not willing to renew. I talked them into a six month extension at a higher interest rate
- Their idea of a workout was only take all my assets and the land
- Took a lot of negotiating
- Using my life savings to certain bills
- was able to slightly reduce rate
- we have numerous projects so we have had varying degrees of success with different lenders.
- We have signed a few loan bifurcation agreements and expect to sign a few more. This gives us breathing room but still requires us to make sales, in a difficult environment, to get through the loans. At some point, there will likely be a deficiency on several of these deals we will have to address. There is no way for us to deal with the deficiency at this time, but if we survive we may be able to pay a percentage of the deficiency.
- We have used all of our savings and even sold our boat. but homes still went into foreclosure
- We were successful but it required another guarantor on the note
- We were unsuccessful in getting any other lender to look at our projects; we worked out a reduced liability for our major project but still lost the development to foreclosure
- yes on C. as long as I pay interest out of pocket No on D. the banks are so bothered by the FDIC that they can not loan Money for development or construction of buildings
